Step 10 Potential Coalition Activities

Some coalitions have a tough time being actionable and can get into habits that impede progress. A few common pitfalls of coalition work include:

- Becoming a 'report out' coalition where members share what they are doing, but there is no collective action.
- Continuously talking about problems, challenges, threats and what can't work, without working towards solutions.
- Sharing new ideas and suggestions but with no one willing or able to turn them into realities.
- Not having a strong mission/purpose or having the goals of the coalition be too broad and unmanageable.
- Members not having clear roles, not understanding why they are members, now knowing what they contribute, etc.

To help avoid these issues, below are some suggestions for coalition activities that create action and movement:

- Write and divide up the strategic plan. During the strategic planning process, take time to parse out coalition member duties and roles. This will help keep the plan actionable and set expectations of members up front.
- Conduct a policy review. Taking inventory and working to update campus policies and procedures related to alcohol, tobacco, and other drug use, crisis intervention and suicide prevention, etc. can be a good task for the coalition. See below for additional resources on conducting a policy review.
- Focus on solving a specific problem. Center discussion around an issue (using data or evidence to support why it needs attention) and work to identify the problems and related behaviors, what the contributing factors are, and what the coalition can do to address the contributing factors.
- Plan and host co-programming events. Whether related to providing alcohol-free options, events in residence halls, or general outreach events, event planning and implementation is common for coalitions.

- Develop a communication plan. Create and share messaging about campus policies, resources for students, educational messages, or social norms campaigns. See below for resources on social norms and effective health messaging.
- Compile information for the annual/biennial review. Work on the Drug Free Schools and Campuses Act (DFSCA) annual/biennial compliance review throughout the year.
- Check out Partners in Prevention’s great resources on DFSCA!
- Raise awareness and advocate for the coalition’s mission and vision. Through other partnerships on campus and in the community, members should work to gain buy-in and foster relationships. There are many partners who do not need to be formal coalition members, but who are important stakeholders and can further the coalition’s mission and vision.
- Engage in shared professional development, training, and education. Pouring into coalition members’ development and learning together about a topic, program, or intervention can create discussion and action. See more resources in step 8 of this toolkit.
